President Speer And The Rev. Mr. White Conduct First Service

At the first service held at Mount Hermon in the Memorial Chapel on Sunday, September 13, at 10.30 a.m. the president of the Northfield Schools, Mr. Elliott Speer, remarked that for the past five years it has been his constant wish to come to know the students of Mount Hermon more intimately. The resignation of Doctor Cutler, the principal of Mount Hermon for the past forty-one years, and his appointment to take the place of this most able gentleman has fulfilled his wish. He goes into the position of principal next year with the realization that Doctor Cutler will be near at hand if there is a need to ask for help.

Mr. Speer took his topic from the following verse: "And Jesus said, 'I am come that they might have life, and that they might have it more abundantly.'"

Briefly telling the history of the founder of the Northfield Schools, Dwight Lyman Moody, Mr. Speer stated, "The aim of all education may be taken from that one verse. Students do not take a subject merely to study for the final examination that they know is inevitably going to come, but for getting prepared for life!"

This verse tells how to live with others, that we are all members of society, and it teaches us to respect rules that are made for the betterment of the community. Jesus did not have these things in mind when he spoke, he possessed them!

Dwight L. Moody's main characteristic was abundant life. It grew within him not suddenly, but by degrees. "To me, to live is Christ," was Mr. Speer's last line.

At the vesper service the Rev. Lester P. White took his topic from the expression "beauty—which is meaning." "Mount Hermon contains something which is beauty, which is meaning," Mr. White asserted.

In building the interior of the Memorial Chapel, the architect Mr. Ralph Harrington Doane, a former student of Mount Hermon, must have had soul-stuff in his keen mind which he interpreted into the pillars that stand strong and firm in the interior. In its beautiful surroundings, and amidst its many traditions lurks that intangible something termed the Hermon Spirit, and those who seek it find, "As the Sundays come and go, and we come to worship in this beautiful building," Mr. White added, "we will come to know the significance that this chapel holds in the minds of former students and those to come." Mr. White closed by repeating the words of Joyce Kilmer's famous poem Trees.

At the both services Mr. Lawrence, the director of the glee club and choir, sang. The song in the morning worship was Vandewater's The Good Shepherd, while at the vesper service the song was entitled O Saviour Hear Me, a Gluck Air arranged by Dudley Buck. In the later song, Mr. Lawrence was accompanied by Emilio C. Calvaca, a member of the class of '20, and Mr. L'Honnemieu, the school organist. Mr. Calvaca also played a solo on his violin, entitled Bois Epaïs from Amadis, written by Lully in 1684.

Cutler at Mount Hermon School, will study secondary education. Their three small children will accompany them.

Expecting to find a small number of people present to attend a social committee meeting, Mr. and Mrs. Speer came to find the house full of friends. Mr. Frank Duley of East Northfield presented Mrs. Speer with a pocketbook and money, while Dr. Cutler gave Mr. Speer a pair of opera glasses. Those in the receiving line besides Mr. and Mrs. Speer were Miss Wilson, and Dr. and Mrs. Cutler.

Many Northfield people attended and those who remained for the evening witnessed a fine display of fireworks.

Fined For Reckless Driving In Death Of Mr. Aldrich

Chester Parzick, 19, of Millers Falls was found guilty of negligently operating an automobile so as to endanger the public as the result of an accident in Northfield Farms on Aug. 12 in which Chester West Aldrich was run down and killed. Parzick was fined $25.

Motor Vehicle Inspector Patrick S. O'Donnell and State Patrolman Walter Burke told of their investigation. It was shortly after 11 p.m., on a rainy night that Aldrich walking along the road was struck and probably instantly killed by the automobile driven by Parzick and owned by the father of one of his companions, Anthony Rydel, also of Millers Falls. With the boys were Mary Shine and Eleanor Crehan of West Springfield and Josephine Dunnigan of Millers Falls.

Dwyer Got His $5.50

In our last week's issue we printed the story of how Chester Wzorek of Hadley was fined $25 for the passing of a worthless check, and that the cost of the wood for which he gave the worthless check was not paid. The decision of the case involving the fine according to Constable Haskell was that it was a criminal case—while the collection of the debt was a civil case independent of the former—and in both events the decision of the court was against him and Mr. Dwyer of Northfield received the amount of his bill. The worthless check was passed on the Northampton National Bank and not on the Northfield National Bank as was stated in a Greenfield paper.

Brooks, who had been a guest here with relatives.

Mr. W. C. Tyler raised a wonderful new kind of corn this summer. It sounds like a "fish story," but it is the truth, by actual measurements, it was 16 feet tall, the stalk weighed 8 lbs., with two large ears to a stalk and the lowest ear was beyond Mr. Tyler's reach and he is of a good height himself. The corn is on exhibition, at the Tyler Homestead, reaching from the ground to the second story window. This is similar to "Jack and the Beanstalk."

EDITORIAL

Northfield has many organizations—perhaps too many for the public to assimilate—(where the membership is open)—and that may be the reason that no organization is a popular one by test of numerical strength. The Editor has received a letter from a well known active citizen suggesting that we scan the lists of all organizations in town—print a roster of their officers—state their purposes and survey their activities. We are inclined to adopt the suggestion and in due time we may take up the effort. If we do have too many organizations and are over "organized" let's give it serious consideration but if we are not—why not support and lend our aid to make the existing organizations more effective.

Forty-three deaths of children from infantile paralysis throughout Massachusetts from January 1 to the middle of August were reported to state authorities and in the same period 130 deaths of children, struck by automobiles, were recorded, according to the Governor's committee on street and highway safety Tuesday. "The fears raised by an epidemic always focus public attention on the dreaded paralysis," says the committee, "but fathers and mothers may well display equal concern over the deadly and maiming automobile, which since the first of the year has claimed three times as many child victims as paralysis in this state."

"I often wonder why it is that life insurance must be secured by solicitation," once said Herbert Hoover. "It is indeed due only to one thing, that is the lack of appreciation of the fundamental character of the investment that they make in insurance, which is an investment in savings, and savings in a form that brings to them not only a direct return from saving but an enormous return in social benefit."

The institution of life insurance is an underlying support to the entire fabric of organized society as we know it today. It provides us with what we can never be sure of providing for ourselves in other ways—security for dependents, or as is the case with some types of policies, security for ourselves in the future. A life insurance policy is often the entire estate of many persons when they die. Almost any other kind of investment may wither or be wiped out entirely—but in the last fifty years there has been not a single loss to policyholders from failure of a legal reserve insurance company.

From the standpoint of logic, it is strange that life insurance business must be solicited. It is probably true that most of us are negligent in obtaining the things that are best for us. But life policies are regarded by millions of people, particularly those of small means, as being the safest, the best and soundest way of investing savings. A large amount of insurance is being carried in Northfield according to all available records.

The other day a number of local men were talking and the subject of the conversation was the present "depression." It was a gloomy subject but the fact remained that not one of the group was seriously affected. If the truth was honestly stated each one had the same income as in the balmy days and their money buys more now than then. The writer felt as the conversation continued that if the thoughts and expressions of these men were more neglectful of pessimism and more optimism prevailed it would go a long way toward a realism of things desired. Right thinking is now necessary and out of this thought will come a brighter and better condition. After all is said and done Northfield has not had the sorrow and suffering of unemployment as have the industrial centers of the commonwealth and we should be profoundly thankful. There is no use wasting our living in worrying over a "depression" or wondering if the bottom of the present depression has been reached or else trying to reach the bottom and single out someone who started it. Better by far let's be optimists and with faith in the government—A way will be found to solve the problems of "depression."

"What impressed me most, and what I shall remember longest, about John Murphy was the bigness of the man. This world is so filled with little men, men no bigger than their petty whims and creeds, that one rejoices in the friendship of a man like him. My parents came from Ireland, where the relations between them and John Murphy's ancestors were none too friendly. I was brought up to wear the orange and to hate the green, but to John Murphy and to others like him I owe a tremendous change of heart. John Murphy helped me climb above my creed and measure mankind with a new yardstick. In this world, where religious prejudice incites riots and marks ballots, in this town of ours where as everywhere so many 'little' people live, we need more John Murphys. 'More of his smile that shone like the sun. More of his joy in work well done.' These were the words of Rev. William J. McCullough, pastor of the Baptist church of Greenfield at the dedication of the Memorial fountain at Franklin Park to the memory of John H. Murphy long time secretary of the Franklin County Agricultural Society. Those who knew Mr. Murphy in Northfield could pay no better tribute.

In the last two years the United States, like the entire world, has been passing through one of the most trying periods in history. Many businesses have been hard pressed and securities have dropped below fair values while profits have often turned to deficits. Under such conditions it is a testimonial to the achievements and soundness of the life insurance industry that it has maintained its high standards of solvency and service unimpaired.

The owner of a policy in any legal reserve life insurance company may be sure that it is as safe as on the day it was purchased. The obligation it represents will be fulfilled to the letter, exactly as in the past. Its borrowing privileges are as good as ever, and its cash value has not been altered.

Hard times have done much to bring out the fact that life insurance, for the person of small means, is about as good an investment as he can find. Every policy is secured by gigantic assets administered by executives of the highest caliber, under strict legal regulation for the policyholder's safety. The record of life insurance is deserving of the highest regard and respect.

To the Editor:—

The text of this article, as of that of last week, is the "preachment" of Dean Brown published in the Herald of September 4. He would sanction a wish, or disposition, or deed looking toward the actualization of the brotherhood of Christian agencies.

While the two Congregational churches of the town bear different descriptive names, we must now consider in the light of what Dean Brown said, speaking of the change to the good which has come in the Christian church at large, that those descriptive names belong to a time anterior to the forty years in which the change has come. The names may still be used to differentiate the two, as organizations rather than as sects, but it does seem that North and South churches sufficiently differentiate them today.

Last year, in the summer of that year, the South church was being renovated, and in the two months, July and August, services were suspended for the purpose, and the services of the Auditorium were commended for their helpfulness, and the people down town were asked to attend them. To the present pastorate these summer conferences seem special interests of the town's people while they widely appeal to sections of the country and even the world. As ministers of the South church we have been impressed with the helpfulness of their messages, and one of us has been a number of years, even before the local residence, a member of classes on the Conference grounds. On the whole, the Conference messages have been truly those of "The Church Today." Some of the hymns sung have been of a discordant past, thus out of harmony with a message of today. But some in our own hymnal offend in a like manner, and we must aim to avoid them in fitting the songs to the message that the service of worship may be a consistent whole.

Early in the Conference season last year, when the sessions had been specially commended to the people down town, it was said from the platform on a Sunday morning by him that presided that the service was in connection with "the vilalge church"—implying there is but one here—and that the offering would be for the proclaiming of the gospel in this town. If the brief correspondence which took place between two of us could appear here it might be a public contribution to happy Christian unity in the community. I was permitted to see to the heart of the man and sense something of the goodness and Christian worth of the man.

This year it was announced, as became usual, that the Sunday morning service of the Conference is with the North Congregational church and that the offering is for the support of the gospel here, and it was once further said that it has so been the custom for fifty years. But fifty years ago antedated the beginning of Charles R. Brown's ministry in the Congregational pulpit and the change that has come in the church universal during his ministry; and forty years, or thirty, or twenty, or even a decade ago there was not the name of a Unitarian or Universalist proposed for the executive board of the School of Religious Education which annually meets as a part of the Conference sessions, and each has been recently so proposed and placed; and within the last decade Universalists—who are Unitarians—have been prominent among the teachers or on the faculty of this school.

Does not the putting of the Sunday morning Conference worship with one church of the town discriminate against another which is here and is today, or in the years that are now passing, represented in the Conference and doing at the same time a Christian work? While its people have never claimed any part of the collections for the proclaiming of the gospel within its wall, should one accept for that what two are doing? Should not the Sunday morning offerings at the Conference be for the Conference? By the number plates of automobiles people attend these meetings from a number of the states of the Union, near and far away. They are here for the Conference and would like to contribute to that as they feel the obligation in its ministries to them. Should they be diverted from it by an appeal for a local church, especially when such appeal discriminates against another church in town which bears a Christian message and is trying to do a Christian work?

We together can acknowledge the power of the Christ, not as a theory or dogma, but as a spirit or a life. In relation to the world or to humanity, he is effective in influence or in what is achieved in his name as a spirit or life. We should hark back to him, not to a dogma about him. Dogma is divisive. The Life is unifying. In abounding good will toward brethren of other belief, and with the thought that the vital faith is one in all and the life of all should be one in spirit.

Possessing the basic goodness of sound design and fine manufacture

From the selection of raw materials to the completion of the finished Chevrolet product, each process of building, assembling and checking the Chevrolet Six is marked by extreme care and precision. An exhaustive system of test and inspection makes certain that every part meets specified dimensions exactly. Many of these parts are held to limits of one ten-thousandth of an inch. No manufacturer in the industry uses more care or precision in building and testing than Chevrolet. Just as every part of the car is soundly built, every feature is soundly designed.

In planning the motor, Chevrolet engineers were not content to offer the public anything less than tried and proved design. They knew that the only satisfactory way to get smooth, flexible power in a car is to use at least six cylinders. So they adopted the six-cylinder engine without compromise. And this is what you get in today's Chevrolet Six.

As a result of this sound designing and sound manufacturing, you can buy a Chevrolet and know you are getting a genuinely good automobile—soundly designed, soundly built, basically and technically right.

First Election Inquest Held In Franklin County

An election inquest was held Wednesday afternoon before Judge Elisha S. Hall in the district court as the result of alleged irregularities arising from the annual meeting at Wendell on March 6. This was the first time in the history of Franklin county that such an inquest has been held, made possible by Section 39, Chapter 55 of the General Laws, which reads as follows:—"Upon a complaint subscribed and sworn to by any person before a district court or trial justice, alleging that reasonable grounds exist for believing that any law relating to the assessment, qualification or registration of voters, or to voting lists or ballots, or to primaries, caucuses, conventions and elections, or to any matters pertaining thereto, has been violated, such court or justice may at once hold an inquest to inquire into alleged violation of law. This was the result of the hectic town meeting which was held in Wendell and the registration of voters which preceded. Opposing each other at the meeting were two groups, one led by Selectman Charles M. Ballou, who has been selectman of Wendell for nearly 30 years and the other led by Ozro D. Baker, former selectman and son of the late Andrew Baker, who was for many years a member of Wendell's official family. Before and since the meeting there has been much ill feeling, so much in fact, that the Baker element which was defeated at the polls in March, refused to take any interest or share in the preparations leading up to the 150th anniversary celebration of the town which took place last month. It has been the charge of certain members of the element opposed to the Ballou regime that there were irregularities with regard to registration of voters which resulted in the victory at the polls of Mr. Ballou and other candidates who were favorable to him.

The inquest was private as required law, witnesses being heard separately. Neither Mr. Ballou nor Mr. Baker were among those present. The witnesses were Selectman Lewis Bowen, George Rush, Town Treasurer Mildred Glidden, Alfred Chapman, Mrs. Annie Burnham, Town Clerk Tremaine Whelpley, Mrs. William Ballou, John Moran, Fred Grew, Henry Champlin, Town Librarian Marion Whitney, Ernest S. Putnam and Charles Fiske. The latter was the complainant. There will be an adjourned session on Saturday, the 19th, at which time additional witnesses will be heard. District Attorney Joseph Bartlett of Greenfield questioned the witnesses at today's inquest.

Washington Gives Approval To Erving-Gill Bridge

The War Department at Washington has given approval of the application of the Massachusetts department of public works for a bridge to be constructed across the Connecticut river between Erving and Gill, Massachusetts, under authority of an act of Congress approved February 28, 1931. The bridge is the one across the Connecticut river at "French King" and is a part of the new "cut-off" of the Mohawk Trail now being built by the state.

Zabko Fined $110

John Zabko of Northfield was convicted of drunkenness and of driving while under the influence and was fined $110 by Judge Ball in District Court last Thursday. Deputy Sheriff Michael Carroll of Millers Falls told of being called to the Zabko home by Mrs. Zabko, because her husband was drunk and had threatened to kill the rest of the family. Approaching the house, Carroll saw Zabko driving into the yard from the highway and questioned him, Zabko admitting having had two drinks of moonshine during the day.

Mrs. Zabko said she and her husband had returned from a trip to Greenfield and Deerfield on August 30. An argument arose between Zabko and one of his 12 children whether the cattle should be given water before ensilage or vice versa. Zabko struck the boy on the chin and the latter told his mother. When Zabko went into the house he received a blow on the nose with a lard pail wielded by Mrs. Zabko. He showed the scar in court today. Called to the witness stand, both Mrs. Zabko and the boy denied the defendant had been drinking. Zabko himself admitted he had taken two drinks with a sprinkling of pepper about 5.30 that morning for stomach trouble.

Changes in fish and game districts affecting game wardens in several Western Massachusetts localities have been announced. Game Warden Lyman E. Ruberg, formerly of Greenfield and now of Shelburne Falls, will cover a more restricted territory than before. He will continue to make Shelburne Falls his headquarters, and will have jurisdiction over the additional towns of Buckland, Conway, Colrain, Rowe, Ashfield, Hawley, Charlemont, Heath and Plainfield. A new district with Greenfield as its center has been created, and Game Warden Arthur F. Hughes of the Nantucket district will be transferred here. His territory will comprise Leyden, Bernardston, Gill, Northfield, Leverett, Whately, Montague, Deerfield, and Sunderland.

Confessions Of A Co-Ed

This is the name of the Paramount film which is to be shown at the Brattleboro Auditorium on Thursday and Friday of next week. Youthful talent was recruited in the production of the picture from the various campuses of the country.

Heading the cast of youth are Phillips Holmes, Sylvia Sidney and Norman Foster, all young actors. Backgrounds for the story, including exterior scenes around the college, sorority house interiors, classrooms and laboratories, were authentically reproduced, from minute observations made on college campuses. The company was taken on one location trip into the California Sierras, for the mountain-resort sequence which climaxes the love story of Miss Sidney and Holmes.

A lavish display of feminine clothes is seen throughout the action. The pajama parties, dances, proms, impromptu parties and "dates," all required their own particular fashions, and as the college girl of today is considered in the best-dressed group, the clothes are up-to-the-minute in materials and design.

The dramatic love story of "Confessions of a Co-Ed" centers around the three featured players. Sylvia Sidney gives her love to Phillips Holmes, but is too tender-hearted to repulse the insistent attentions of Norman Foster. Claudia Dell, whom Sylvia believes her friend, is really her rival for the affection of Holmes. Holmes, after a wild escapade with Claudia, is expelled from college, and disappears. Sylvia is lead by Claudia to believe he has deserted her. Sylvia marries Foster. Then Holmes returns to claim her, and an intense climax results.

The story goes behind the scenes into the carefree life of a girl's sorority where friendship and jealousy, affection and hidden hate thrive amidst the glamorous atmosphere of initiations, dances, proms and "dating." It deals with boys and girls who become independent men and women overnight, uncontrolled except by a few rules which only whet the interest in forbidden pleasures. Its characters are the lavish-living youth of America's colleges.

Airport Dedication At Brattleboro

Brattleboro's Airport is called Crowell field and is located on the acreage north of the Spofford Lake road between Putney Road and the river. It was officially dedicated on Saturday and Sunday and several thousand were in attendance on Sunday—Many going up from Northfield in spite of the fact that the airport officials failed to properly advertise the event.

During the afternoon on Sunday Congressman Ernest W. Gibson spoke as also did State Commissioner of Motor Vehicles Pierce. Both spoke highly of the airport and were loud in their praise of C. B. Crowell, to whose public spirited enterprise the airport is due.

Roscoe Brinton of Springfield, Mass., was on the scene flying a Waco 16 biplane. Brinton gave an exhibition of stunting. He held the crowd speechless with loops, barrel rolls and tailspins, finally culminating the performance with a beautiful dead-stick landing. Cliff Daniels of Greenfield, Mass., also made a dead-stick landing as did Fred H. Harris of Brattleboro.

Len Povey of Springfield, presented stunting and upside-down flying. Povey whipped the big Brinton-style new Standard biplane around like a coy, looping, whip-stalling and side slipping. He like Brinton, received a big ovation from the crowd on landing.

"Chuck" O'Connor of Westfield won the bomb-dropping contest.

Roscoe Brinton "world's champion balloon buster" exploded several balloons to the delight of the spectators. The program was closed with a parachute jump by Eddie DeAlmo.

Admiral Higginson Dies

Word was received here of the death Sunday night in Kingston, N. Y., of Rear Admiral Francis J. Higginson, 88, U. S. N., retired, who fought in the Civil War and the War with Spain and later commanded the North Atlantic fleet.

Mrs. Higginson, whom he married in 1878, survives. Mr. Higginson was born in Boston, a member of an old and distinguished New England family. His gallantry during the war earned him advancement of three numbers in rank and the title of commodore for conspicuous service in battle. Not long after the rank of rear admiral was conferred upon him. Admiral Higginson was a frequent visitor to Greenfield and at Northfield and had many friends in both places.

Orange-Athol "Cut-Off"

Many Northfield motorists have observed for some time the construction work of the Orange-Athol "cut-off" while passing through the towns on the Boston Highway. The new road is entirely to the north of the B. & M. R. tracks and has no bridge over which to pass. It was hoped the new road would have been finished ere this but it is doubtful if the job can now be completed before October.

This will shorten the distance somewhat between Orange and Athol, but its principal asset is in the fact that it will eliminate two railroad bridge crossings with dangerous approaches where many accidents have occurred in the past. The new way cuts out all dangerous points and straightens out the road. The Rossi company has been working on this comparatively short strip of road since last fall, but have been delayed by reason of a bad ledge which was encountered on the west end.

WORTHWHILE PREACHMENTS

Have Souls Gone Out Of Fashion?

In a book "Behaviorism A Battle Line," edited by William P. King, is a chapter entitled "Have Souls Gone Out Of Fashion?" by Rufus M. Jones, a teacher in Haverford College and a Quaker preacher who occupied the platform of the Auditorium at the Conference three years ago and addressed the ministers in Sage Chapel. Two paragraphs and a part of another from his chapter are here given for Herald readers—

One of the most striking facts of our human experience is knowing that we know. We link up every fact that we know with the further consciousness that we know it. There is a well-known story of a man who went to market with his cart and oxen to sell a load of potatoes. Having sold his potatoes for good money, the farmer (it happened in ante-prohibition days) indulged too freely in the tavern liquor of the period. The oxen wandered about unguided with the owner lying in a drunken stupor on the bottom of the empty cart. Meantime a passer-by seeing a good team of oxen going about with no driver, detached them from the cart and drove them off. When the farmer began to "come to" and in his half-awakened consciousness observed the fact that there were no oxen yoked to the cart, he drew out the following confused reflections: "I don't know exactly who I am. If I am Bill Simpkins, as I thought I was, I've lost a yoke of oxen; but if I ain't Bill, I have found a good cart." The trouble with the perplexed farmer was that he did not quite succeed in coming sufficiently to himself so that he could link up the scattered facts of observation with a self that could weave them into a single web of integrated experience with the added characteristic trait of personally knowing that he knew them.

We do not need to insist on an absolutely identical self that never alters from the cradle to the grave, for that comes to be an absurd identity, like the old substance theory. What we want, and what we must have if we are to have knowledge at all, is a more or less permanent nucleus of a self that genuinely accumulates and saves up the past, binds it with the living present, and at the same time anticipates a coherent future, all of which are felt to belong to the same self, or at least to a self that is near enough "same" to preserve its feeling of identity—like Jerico Billings' boots, which, during the twenty years that Jerico wore them, had new tops five times and were resoled fifteen times, but remained through all the flow and welter of time the same pair of good old, comfortable boots.

Nobody wants the absolutely unalterable, static self of the old dead theories. What we want is the kind of a self that will really account for us and will explain the incontrovertible fact of knowledge. Each one of us looks out on his world from his own particular point of view, with peculiar interests and with a novel shade of meaning that remains forever ours....

It is in men, as in soil, where sometimes there is a vein of gold which the owner knows not of.—Swift.

Northfield Man Sued For $2500 Wages

In superior court before Judge Alonzo B. Weed and a jury was started last Thursday the case of Leander A. Woods and his wife, Rose Anna Woods of South Hadley against Adlard J. Monat and trustees of Northfield.

Mr. and Mrs. Woods sue for $2500 they say is due in wages. They declare that they were hired by Mr. Monat in the spring of 1928 to work for a year at the Mountain View hotel at Northfield. Mrs. Woods to be manager of the hotel and Mr. Woods to be handy man about the place. Monat admits hiring the couple at the rate of $100 a month together with room and board, but denies that it was for a year, and says that when Mr. and Mrs. Woods left late in July 1928, he paid them in full.

Stapleton and Hurley are the attorneys of the plaintiffs. Davenport and Davenport represent the defendant.

A verdict for the defendant was reported to Judge Alonzo B. Weed in Superior court at Springfield in the suit of Leander A. and Rose Anna Woods of South Hadley against Adlard J. Monat of Northfield in which the plaintiffs asked $2500 for an alleged breach of an agreement of employment. They alleged that Monat agreed to employ them for a year at a rate of $100 a month and board and room but that he did not do so. Richard P. Stapleton attorney for the plaintiffs and Davenport & Davenport for the defendant.

Many believe that the only persons who get ahead in life are those who earn large incomes. That is not the case. The person who gets ahead is the one who consistently spends less than he earns and saves the margin for his needs in later life.

If you will study the lives of successful people, you will find that almost without exception they started out with modest incomes and began early in life to save money and to invest their savings in sound investments.
